Dealer notes

1982 Honda ATC 250R two-stroke three-wheeler. This California-owned and titled first-generation 250R is a nice survivor, still wearing its original plastics and fenders, with the mud splash guards intact. It retains the original headlight and bezel, along with many of the original stickers still in place. This bike has not undergone any restoration work but would make an excellent restoration candidate, especially since it comes with a proper title. The front fender does have some stress cracking in a few areas, while the rear plastic is in excellent condition, as shown in the photos. The inside of the fuel tank is extremely clean and non-rusty. The tank has been fogged for storage and drained, and the engine has also been fogged to preserve it during storage. This unit is an extra that does not fit the criteria for our personal collection, which is why it is being offered for sale. The tires are not original, and the seat cover has been replaced. It does include a title, which is very rare for these machines. We were able to get the unit to start, but due to it sitting for a long period of time, we would highly suggest a thorough service and likely new rings. It did start, and it has since been properly drained and fogged again for storage. Price does not include $0 processing fee
