Dealer notes

1978 Ford F-250 Ranger Lariat Fummins 4x4. No, that’s not a misspelling! This is a Ford with a 12-valve Cummins and, best of all, a manual 5-speed transmission. This truck is built on a second-generation Dodge chassis that is completely rust-free. It features a 4-link lift kit, brand-new front suspension components, new tie rods, a fresh alignment, dual steering stabilizers, and 38-inch Super Swamper radial tires mounted on alloy wheels. This truck is rock-solid, wearing its original paint and patina, with virtually no rust other than surface rust and one small spot on the rear fender that is smaller than a dime. Inside, you’ll find the factory interior and seat, along with a retro radio. Under the hood is an aluminum radiator and intercooler, both cleanly mounted in the front grille, along with a perfectly era-correct bug shield. This truck is amazing to look at and even more fun to drive. The manual transmission, heavy-duty axles, and functional four-wheel drive make it an absolute blast. You could easily send this truck to the paint shop if you wanted a perfectly finished, shiny truck, but all the trim is already in place, and the glass is in excellent condition. The patina is what really draws attention to this one! The upgrades we are planning to complete include adding an electric A/C system, installing a spray-in bedliner, and making a few other miscellaneous improvements.
