Dealer notes

Offered for sale is this 2021 Dodge Challenger Hellcat Redeye Widebody, finished in White Knuckle with black trim over a Black and Demonic Red leather interior, powered by a supercharged 6.2 liter 8-cylinder engine, running power to the rear wheels through an eight-speed automatic transmission, with 20,940 miles on the odometer. Not much needs to be said about the Hellcat Challenger, a model permanently etched in American culture - far beyond the normal car enthusiast crowd. It is an original member of the Pony Car class, traditionally sharing space alongside the Ford Mustang and Chevrolet Camaro - but through this generation it managed to loom large both in size and stature. While its larger dimensions meant it wasn't meant to compete with the Camaro and Mustang on road circuits for lap times, the straight line Hellcat menace era started here, with the original 707 hp version released in 2015 establishing a major tipping point in American horsepower wars. That gauntlet-throwing approach that Dodge preferred led to this version, the Hellcat Redeye Widebody. Already the biggest Pony coupe, the widebody version employs extra aggression and stance, while the Redeye variant serves up 797 hp, more than enough to require judicious application of the throttle. Notable options on this well-maintained example includes Widebody competition suspension, 3.09 rear axle ratio, Laguna leather upgraded seats with ventilation, and Uconnect navigation with an 8.4in screen.
